

Tip 21: Be a ‘One-Team’ Facilitator whenever possible

For a Scrum Master to be effective in his/ her duties, one team at a time is more than sufficient

Any is applicable when talking about scrum and the masters

Scrum Mastering one team, especially if you are starting out, is a challenge that requires maximum effort

A Scrum Master always has a lot on his/ her plate

Working with two teams at the same time doubles
the work quantity

It is good to be ambitious, but be careful not to overdo it

✓ 100%

✗ 50%

✓ 100%

✗ 50%

You will be saving yourself, your manager and your team so that you can be the best you can be!

In Summary

- It is advisable for the Scrum Master to work with one team at a time to prevent division of time and effort between teams.
- The daily work of a scrum master is a lot to handle; trying to double that amount of work might be putting your body and mind under duress.
- Evaluate why you feel the need to 'manage' two or more teams and use this to determine if managing two teams is worth the extra effort and headache.

In Summary

- It is advisable for the Scrum Master to work with one team at a time to prevent division of time and effort between teams.
- The daily work of a scrum master is a lot to handle; trying to double that amount of work might be putting your body and mind under duress.
- Evaluate why you feel the need to 'manage' two or more teams and use this to determine if managing two teams is worth the extra effort and headache.
- If your manager is asking you to Scrum Master for two teams and you know you cannot give both teams the value that you should be giving them, book a meeting with your manager and politely tell them so with reasons why.

In Summary

- It is advisable for the Scrum Master to work with one team at a time to prevent division of time and effort between teams.
- The daily work of a scrum master is a lot to handle; trying to double that amount of work might be putting your body and mind under duress.
- Evaluate why you feel the need to 'manage' two or more teams and use this to determine if managing two teams is worth the extra effort and headache.
- If your manager is asking you to Scrum Master for two teams and you know you cannot give both teams the value that you should be giving them, book a meeting with your manager and politely tell them so with reasons why.